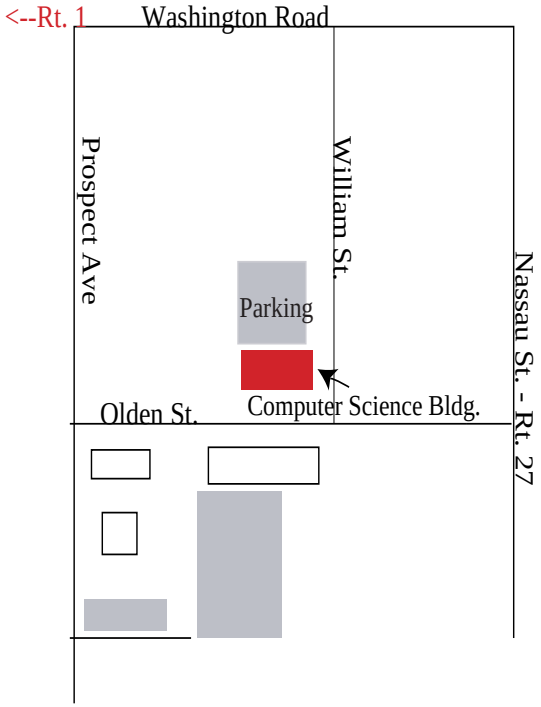
A workshop sponsored by
DIMACS

DIMACS is supported by the National Science Foundation and is a partnership of Princeton University, Rutgers University, AT&T Bell Labs. and Bellcore.

Co-Sponsors:
University Center for Human Values and the Committee on Science, Technology, Ethics, and Policy
Princeton University



Design for Values

Ethical, Societal & Policy Dimensions of Information Technology

February 28 – March 1, 1998

Organizers:

Helen Nissenbaum
University Center for Human Values
helen@princeton.edu

Bernard Chazelle
Department of Computer Science
chazelle@cs.princeton.edu

Program

Saturday, February 28th
Computer Science Bldg.
35 Olden Street
Small Auditorium, Room 105

9:00-9:30 Continental Breakfast

9:30 – 10:00 Introductory Remarks

10:00 – 12:00
Panel I – Philosophical Perspectives

Philip Brey, Technical University Twente, The Netherlands
Marvin Croy, University of North Carolina
Deborah Johnson, Rensselaer Polytechnic University
James Moor, Dartmouth College
Jeroen van den Hoven, Erasmus University-Rotterdam, The Netherlands
Moderator: Helen Nissenbaum, Princeton University

12:00-1:30 Lunch

1:30 – 3:30
Panel II – Technical Perspectives

Edward Felten, Princeton University
Batya Friedman, Colby College
Brian LaMacchia, Microsoft Corporation
Abbe Mowshowitz, City University of New York
Moderator: Joan Feigenbaum, AT&T Research

3:30-4:00 Break

4:00 – 6:00
Panel III –Social Science Perspectives

Rob Kling, University of Indiana
Lucas Introna, London School of Economics
Janet Schofield, University of Pittsburgh
Susan Leigh Star, University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana
Paul Starr, Princeton University
Moderator: Michael Mahoney, Princeton University

Sunday, March 1
Computer Science Bldg.
Small Auditorium, Room 105

9:00-9:30 Continental Breakfast

10:00 – 12:00
Panel IV – Policy Perspectives

Jean Camp, Harvard University
Lorrie Cranor, AT&T Research
Deborah Hurley, Terra Nova & Harvard University
W. Russell Neuman, University of Pennsylvania
Lodis Rhodes, University of Texas, Austin
Moderator: Thom